SBIRT—Screening, Brief Intervention and Referral to Treatment

Connecting substance use and health

Diet, exercise, smoking and substance use are the main factors affecting wellness. Asking the right questions gives you the right information and substance use may be the one thing you're not asking about. Connecting substance use with health, SBIRT is a small investment with large returns, both in costs and improved health. Make the connection with SBIRTmentor.

SBIRTmentor integrates MedRespond's interactive technology with the training curriculum of Peer Assistance Services and NORC at the University of Chicago into a comprehensive and personalized training experience. Using cutting-edge, user-friendly technology found only on SBIRTmentor, the training presents relevant situations that healthcare professionals frequently encounter.

Presented in modules for each SBIRT core competency, SBIRTmentor offers three interactive segments: discussion, vignettes and practice. Participants are challenged to practice skills through a variety of simulated interactions. With each practice, learners receive real-time feedback and scoring through the analytic dashboard that reinforces SBIRT skills.
